32 Iran Ex-Officials Arrested by Regime

TEHRAN, Nov. 7 (AP) — Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi's two-day-old military government, trying to quell violent opposition to the monarch's authoritarian rule, announced the arrests today of 32 fnrmer ministers and ranking civil officials, including a former head of Savak, the secret police.

At the same time, officials at Reza Pahlavi Hospital said that retired Air Force Gen. Ali Mohammed Khademi, dismissed as managing director of Iran Air, died from a gunshot wound received Sunday. ## S. African Minister Resigns in Scandal

PRETORIA, Nov. 7 (NYT) -South Africa's second-ranking gov-ernment minister, Cornelius Mulder, resigned tonight amid the scan-dal enveloping the secret opinion-molding activities and bizarre financial practices of the government Information Ministry, which Mr. Mulder headed until deprived of the portfolio two months ago. Mr. Mulder, protesting his inno-

He vowed to establish his honesty before the judicial inquiry appointed last week to investigate the scandal.

"I have no pangs of conscience about the entire matter because evcrything I have done I did in the conviction that I was serving my country, South Africa, in the best wny," Mr. Mulder said. In their cautiously phrased announcement, the re-searchers reported that 5 of 40 dogs, whose spinal cords were surgically destroyed, were able to walk af-ter surgery designed to stimulate the repair and regrowth of the damaged nerves.

If traditional medical wisdom were correct, the animals would never have recovered, for one of the axioms in medicine has always been that a damaged spinal cord cannot be repaired.

Dr. Carl Kao and his colleagues said that their findings will not help persons who are paralyzed. They also said that they are anywhere from six months to several years away from trials on humans.

Filling the Gap

The surgical portion of the technique developed by Dr. Kao, an associate professor at Georgetown and chief of neurosurgery at the Veterans Administration hospital here, involved filling the gap in the injured cord with pieces of nerve from another portion of the cal College of Wisconsin, and has been working on cats at Georgetown. He said that he should know by January how successful the procedures have been in the cats.

The researchers delivered three papers yesterday on their apparent breakthrough at the annual meeting of the Society for Neuroscience in St. Louis.

In an interview, Dr. Kao said that his work with spinal cord regeneration was greatly helped by Dr. Leshe Freeman of Indiana University, who "had been doing this work for about 20 years. He thought the

"and I proposed that the scar could be easily removed.
You could culture the hrain, scoop a little piece of the brain and put it in a culture medium. The cells will grow and then you can put it in the spinal cord and there will be nn scar. But then the cavity [formed by the dying tissue] was there, and we found nut that the cavity was the problem.

It is a very, very, important process."

Dr. Kao learned that the axons, the main portions of the nerve libers in the spine, were trying to grow down into the break in the spine.

"The axons were trying to come down," he said, "and they have lots of power to come down, but when they get to the end [of the break], the insulation of the nerve in the spinal cord is so sticky and fragile, it's just like a sleeve." He paused and grasped his right jacket sleeve with his left hand, preventing his right hand from breaking free of the sleeve.

"There's no way the axon can come ont unless it explodes, and when it explodes it explodes itself. And it has enzymes that destroy the entire area. So any attempts at regeneration always end in self-destruc-

Now, even the optimists believe that the shah is battling against mounting odds for survival.

Net Effect

The net effect of the intense discussions in Washington was to underline that, while perceptions of Iran may have shifted rapidly, poli-cy has cot. Even officials who feel that the shah's days may be numbered are not seriously arguing that the administration can do any thing to separate itself at this moment from a ruler whom the United States has supported with-out reservation for 25 years.

Strike by Bakers Stirs U.K. Rush. On Cakes, Buns

LONDON, Nov. 7 (UPI) -- Britain's bakers went on strike for the second time in as many years today and shoppers rushed to stock up on crackers, tea cakes and buns.

Union leaders warned that the walkout by the 30,000 bakers in Britain's chain bakeries could last for months and cut supplies by

"It will be a long drawn-out battle," said union leader Sam Maddox. "How long? That's up to the employers. It could go on for anything up to three months." The employers' federation assailed the strike as "anti-social" and said it would inflict heavy damage on the troubled industry.

The union is demanding a 26percent pay increase — despite the Labor government's "guideline" maximum of 5 percent. This would mean an extra $20 a week, bringing the minimum basic wage to $103 a week, not including overtime pay and fringe benefits.

Roger Young, chief of the FBI's San Diego office, said that Stanley Rifkin, 32, of Los Angeles, was arrested at a friend's apartment in Carlsbad, 20 miles northwest of San Diego.

San Diego. Mr. Young said that Mr. Rifkin pierced Security Pacific's security systems on Oct. 25 and transferred $10.25 million of the bank's money to his account in New York. He transferred the money to an ac-count in Zurich, traveled to Switzerland, bought $8.14 million worth of polished diamonds from the Soviet diamond firm of Russalmaz and returned to California with the gerns, Mr. Young said.

Unused Money Found

A Beverly Hills police spokes-man said that Mr. Rifkin pawned a few of the diamonds at a Beverly Hills pawnshop on Oct. 30, Mr. Young said that the rest of the money — $2,055,000 — has been found in a foreign bank account and is being held for return to Security Pacific. Mr. Rifkin surrendered without resistance to seven FBI agents. He was being held at the Metropolitan Correctional Center, a federal prison in San Diego, and is scheduled to be arraigned in federal court on a charge of transporting stolen property across state lines. He faces a maximum 10-year prison term and $10,000 fine.

Asked whether Mr. Rifkin had blown an almost perfect crime by returning to the United States, Mr.
Young said that the accused thief might have felt "more comfortable closer to home" and added, "Just because he was in Europe didn't mean he was home free."

Gems Valued at $13 Million

The FBI agent displayed rows of envelopes and cellophane bags that he said contained the diamonds, worth up to $30,000 each. He said that an appraiser had estimated the retail value of all the gens at as high as $13 million.

Mr. Young said that he did not know who would be able to claim any profits from Mr. Rifkin's diamond deal - up to $5 million. Security Pacific, meanwhile, divulged new details on how the fraudulent transfer was made.

Bank vice chairman George
Moody said that Mr. Rifkin, an independent computer consultant, had worked at the bank as a subcontractor. "He was known to our personnel as a consultant," Mr. Moody said.

FBI Suspects Emigre Plot In Croat Extortion Cases

By Nicholas M. Horrock

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7 (NYT) The FBI is looking into what is believed to be an international plot in which a New York man was recently murdered and a Chicago factory was firebombed in an apparent attempt to extort money from Americans of Yugoslav descent, bureau officials said yesterday.

Those incidents and others apparently represent a further exten-sion on U.S. soil of an often violent struggle between the Communist government of Yugoslavia and emigre groups that seek the re-estabishment of the Croatian state and the overthrow of President Tito. U.S. officials fear that the recent murder may signal the recurrence of terrorist incidents in the United States stemming from the world-wide struggle. In 1975, forces in-volved in the same controversy were suspected of blowing up a portion of LaGuardia Airport's main terminal. The following year a group of Croatian terrorists hijacked a Trans World Airlines plane. The group was arrested in Paris but not before a New York police officer was killed while trying to dismantle a bomb placed in Grand Central Terminal.

In the most recent violence, Anthony Cikoja, 48, of Greenburgh, N.Y., near Scarsdale, was shot to death on Sept. 28 as he left his home for work. Three months before he had received a letter from a group calling itself the "Croatian Intelligence Service," demanding that he send $5,000 to an address in Paraguay.

Mr. Cikoja's son Frank said that, although his father was of Croatian descent, he had lived in the United States 27 years and had not been not been involved in emigre politics. He said his father had refused to pay the money.

The letter to Mr. Cikoja, FBI officials said, was one of two dozen extortion letters that have been reported in New York, Chicago, Cleveland and San Francisco.

On Oct. 4, the Danmarie Cabinet Co, in Chicago was damaged by a firebomb. The owner, Daniel Nikolic, an American of Croatian descent, said that he, too, had received such a letter. He said he had reported it to the FBI, but that the bureau "didn't do a damn thing about it." He said he had not participated in emigre political activities for several years.

The letter, written in a Croatian dialect and signed by a "command er of operations," Trpimir Budrovic, appears to have come from an emigre group that the Yugoslav government has said is made up of international terrorists. West German press reports said that there are documented instances of Croatian groups collecting money through such extortion.

But Mr. Nikolie and several leaders of the American-Croatian community said that they believed the letters had been mailed by the Yugoslav secret police to discredit the Croatian separatist movement. The FBI has been unable to establish the source of the letters or the identity of the men who shot Mr. Cikoja. He was killed by three .32-caliber bullets apparently fired from a car.

Mr. Cikoja's murder occurred in year when two supporters of President Tito's government were shot and wounded in New York, the Yugoslav consulate in San Francisco was set afire, and the West German consulate in Chicago was briefly invaded and bostages were taken in an effort to force the West German government to free several Croatians held on charges of terror-

Minister Andrei Gromyko.

Despite their evident desire to make a fresh start with Washington, the Soviet officials take a narrow view of the potential room for further agreements. They make the following points:

Moscow wants a new arms treaty, bot does not believe that it will automatically lead to agree-ment in other areas like the Middle East or Africa.

 The Soviet leaders grudgingly admire President Carter for inducing Egypt and Israel to negotiate even though the Kremlin opposes a "separate deal."

The Russians do not believe that an Egyptian-Israeli treaty will last or that it will resolve the main issues; they resent being excluded from the Middle East by U.S. diplomacy, but they say that they are oot willing to let that stand in the way of cooperation on arms ontrol.

The Kremin is not opposed

· The Russians seek better terms of trade with the United States and want them separated or the treatment of dissidents, but even then Moscow does not expect trade to expand very soon. · The Soviet leadership does

The picture drawn by the officials is one of limited areas of coopcration and many continued areas of disagreement. The arms pact re-mains the centerpiece of U.S.-Soviet relations. "A new treaty," Mr. Falin said.

"would give greater confidence than there is at the moment that we can continue on the course of arms reductions that we began together in the early 1970s. It would be of symbolic meaning because, for the first time, reduction would be expressed not only as an intention but as a concrete figure."

The twn sides have agreed ultimately to reduce their arsenals of strategie missiles and bombers from more than 2,400 to 2,250. But there has been no accord on several issues, such as the timing of the reduction, whether to include a controversial Soviet bomber known as Backfire and how to count United States Cruise missiles in the overall totals.

Emphasizing that ontstanding "political" issues could be resolved only by high-level decisions in Moscow and Washington, Mr. Fal-in said that Mr. Brezknev would be willing to sign a treaty in a meeting with Mr. Carter. A discussion of such a meeting

Bartering is seen as an answer to inflation and the diminishing dollar, to the problems of high interest, too much inventory, too much cash flow, too many bouncing checks and too many accounts

At least five trade exchanges, each elaiming membership of hun-dreds of merchants, have opened in the Denver area. The president of one, the seven-month-old North American Trade Exchange, says business is so good that she plans to open offices in Houston, Dallas, the Pacific Northwest and, perhaps, Hawaii, within six months. Her firm has four offices in Colorado.

Exchange Enterprises, with head-quarters in Salt Lake City, has 35 offices, including one in Denver. It does not advertise; membership grows by referral, said Paul Meyer, vice president of the locally carred vice president of the locally owned Payment for goods and services is generally taxable to the recipient, whether such payment is made in cash or in nonmonetary form. Thus, if a painter accepts a car repair from a mechanic in exchange for painting the mechanie's house.

No Shump Seen

However, Proposition 13 has not resulted in the wholesale trimming of government that some of its advocates called for, or in the crippling of essential services that many of its opponents had predicted. Nor has it touched off the economic slump in California that some economists predicted. Many government officials and economic specialists say that the state legislature's decision to replace most of the property taxes that cities, counies and schools lost merely delays the day of reckening. merely delays the day of reckoning; However, Proposition 13, which t property taxes by almost 60 recent, has had many other effects virtually every second of the lost revenues permanently, local government will be severy the lost revenues permanently, local government will be severy the lost revenues permanently. verely affected beginning next year. virtually every segment of govit has forced a transfer of political cut spending has subsided, al-

However, in a business situation if two firms trade inventory of equal market value, there is no applicable tax if there is no gain. If both parties remain in the same

Marilyn Gallagher, director of the Trade Exchange in Denver, said that she thinks the IRS "is just getting interested in general in trading, wby people are bartering so much. are they using that as a way of avoiding taxes. Really, it's not a tax avoidance, sometimes it's a delay in avoidance, concludes it's a delay in tax. # 'Genet' of the New Yorker Dies at 864

NEW YORK, Nov. 7 (NYI) — Janet Flanner, 86, the "Genet" whose "Letter From Paris" appeared in the New Yorker for 50 years, died here yesterday of a heart attack at Lenox Hill Hospital. Miss Flanner had returned to live in New York in recent years because of ill health. A collection of her recent writings, as yet untitled, will be published soon. "I'm not one of those journalists with a staff. I don't even have a secretary. I act as a sponge. I soak it up and squeeze it out in ink every

This was how Miss Flanner, the doyenne of foreign corespondents in France, modestly described her work, a biweekly "Letter From Paris" that appeared in the New Yorker magazine over the signature of Genet for some 50 years. These dispatches contained some of the most cosmopolitan and insightful reporting from France in that peri-od, reflecting the stern admonision imparted to Miss Flanner by Harold Ross, her first editor, in 1925.

"I'm not paying you to tell me what you think," the idiosyncratic Mr. Ross had said. "I want to know what the French are thinking.

To find out, Miss Flanner pervaded Paris (and France), accum lating both an unexcelled knowledge of the ouances of French life and an unmatched collection of friends. With a keen eye for the significant in politics, art, the theater and the changing conditions of life, she put her observations every two weeks into 2,500 words of chatty but polished prose, in which the word "I" never appeared.

Miss Flanner toiled to produce ber characteristic style. The weekend before she dispatched her copy, she was accustomed to seclude her self in her top-floor room (No. 481) at the Hotel Continental on the Rue Castiglione and to write day and night.

"I keep going over a sentence," she explained once. "I nag it, gnaw it, pat it and flatter it."

The same craftsmanship went into Miss Flanner's profiles of illustrious and notorious men and women that were published in the New Yorker and later appeared in books - "An American in Paris" and "Men and Moouments." The variety of her subjects was an index to her interests: Eugene Weidmann, a multiplo murderer; Marthe Hanau, a confidence woman: William C. Bullitt, a dashing diplomat: Queen Mary of England; Pablo Picasso, Edith Wharton, Hitler, Matisse, Malraux and Marshal

Nicaragua Proposes Liberalization Plan

The government has submitted li-beralization proposals to internanional mediators for settlement of the Nicaraguan crisis without the resignation of President Anastasio

The Broad Opposition Front, an imbrella political group secking an end to the Somoza dynasty, set a 15-day deadline, beginning yester-day, to solve the crisis.

Its communique did not say what the group would do if the deadline is not met.

A government source said that the proposals did not include Gen. Somoza's resignation "because such an action would entail the violation of our constitution."

"But it contains a series of wideranging proposals to liberalize Ni-caragua so that it will satisfy the He probable president's enemies such as a new electoral law under which all par-ties can participate in the process for a free election as well as a reorganization of the judicial system to make it more equitable," the source

The Military in the Middle

The appointment by Shah Mobammed Reza Pahlavi, of a military government for Iran was virtually inevitable. The shah bas heen confronted with both ends of the political spectrum, radical students and conservative Moslems, and if the nation that is so significant strategically and in terms of oil supply is not to descend into anarchy, some kind of single rule must be imposed. The shah has allowed for the possibility of change; he bas apologized for whatever gave substance to the charges against his government. But for the moment, at least - a moment of strikes and violent demonstrations - he relies on the armed forces to sus-

Assuming that the troops are able to maintain the power of the shah, it will still he far from easy to hring Iran to a constitutional regime. For not only are the political extremes opposing him. There is a very widespread discontent in Iran, the result of the political and technological revolution the shah and the times bave introduced into the country. This discontent takes many forms. There is the kind of trouble that afflicts the traditional small husinessman under the impact of modern merchandizing - France, among other industrial states, has seen that issue arise among the Poujadists. There is a more general disturbance over the way in which the shah has spent oil revenues on weapons — a subject that is prohably chiefly focused on the popular wish for something more personal and comfortable than tanks, guns and planes to emerge from their oil wells, hut which does have a relationship with Iran's neighbors, including Iraq and the Soviet Union.

Many aspects of these sources of Iranian annoyance with their government find voice in religious traditionalism, which has often been a major political influence in Moslem countries. Whether through the Mahdi in the Sudan or the Saudi dynasty, an emphasis on religion has and does play a significant role in many states. But — as is the case in Iran today — it is not always easy to predict. in political terms, just what this influence is likely to produce. It can range from forms of socialism, as in Iraq and Svna, through the conservatism of Saudi Arahia to the mere adventurism of an ldi Amin.

The religious rebels in Iran emphasize means — an Islamic republic — rather than specific goals with respect to the country's economy. This is probably one reason why the traditionalists of Iran's Moslem establishment have not clashed with the student radicals, who tend toward more specific forms of socialism. And since the leftist and the religious groups tend to agree about the need for using Iranian funds for other purposes than arms, they have that too, in common.

But arms expenditures can affect Iran's neighbors and can recreate some of the ties with the Soviet Union that developed during the initial creation of the Iranian oil industry and in World War II. The United States presently shares the opposition the shah has evoked — but there are still memories of Soviet intervention in Iran and there may well be sharp differences over how far a new Iran might drift away from Islamic socialism toward atheistic Communism.

Consequently, Iran needs a hreathing period in which to define the aims of the various groups now contending with the shah, and to spell out its national positions, with the United States, with the Soviet Union and with the Arab League. None of these are clear: all could complicate the nation's difficulties. It must he hoped that the military will supply this time of discussion, for the shah as well as for his people. Iran is too important, in place, in power, in petroleum, to lapse into a con-

Amin's Invasion

How is it that a crazy like Idi Amin of Uganda gets to be able to invade Tanzania? It's that the Soviet Union, prowling for pawns to move on the African chesshoard, loaded up President Amin with the military hardware he has now put to aggressive use against his neighbor. Without Soviet guns and planes - and the encouragement they provide - Ugandan forces would not be sitting on some 700 square miles of northern Tanzania. Amin's claim that he is merely responding to a Tanzanian invasion has no demonstrable basis at all.

The Russians also supply guns to Tanzania; there the Soviet purpose evidently is to displace Peking as Tanzania's leading military patron. This puts Moscow in the position of, in effect, sponsoring one client's aggression against another. Other African states have a powerful interest in persuading the Soviet Union to cut off Uganda. By doing so, Moscow would at once be aiding one of the more progressive African states, punishing the most savage regime on the continent and bolstering the essential African principle of respect for colonially drawn frontiers. Otherwise, since geography and the deployment of forces make it hard for Tanzania to drive the Ugandans out, Tanzania's Julius Nyerere could he in very difficult straOne further possibility is that Kenya, through which all of landlocked Uganda's oil and other imports pass, could staunch the flow. The trouble here is that Kenya and Tanzania have their own nasty feud going. They now have fresh and urgent reasons to talk out their differences. Idi Amin is an embarrassment and menace to all of Africa, and all Africans share an interest in seeing his occupation of northern Tanzania rolled back and Amin's own rule brought to an end. He is no less loathsome, we might add, for playing the buffoon: The other oav. Amin. a hulking former boxer, challenged the slight Nyerere to settle the war in a boxing match.

The United States has sharply condemned the Ugandan invasion. Just last month, trade with Uganda was halted in response to Amin's gross human-rights violations, including his butchery of hundreds of thousands of his own citizens. As it happens, the cutoff left Washington with no easy way, beyond words, of taking concrete steps to help out Tanzania in the current crisis arising from actions Amin has taken outside his own borders. That means in practical terms that his invasion has to be dealt with either by the Russians or the Africans, in their respective

The UN Secretary General, Kurt Waldheim, should accept the invitation of Cambodia to see with his own eyes the humanrights situation in the country its rulers call "Democratic Kampuchea."

Not that Waldheim would see anything his hosts didn't want him to see. No doubt it would be something like an International Red Cross inspector's visit to a sanitized World War 11 Nazi POW camp.

Certaintly he wouldn't see where all the bodies are buried. Estimates of the number of Cambodians who have been liquidated by the Pol Pot regime since 1975, through execution, starvation, disease and overwork, range up to 2 million.

But Western journalists have been invited to accompany Waldheim, and if permitted reasonable freedom of movement they might be able to penetrate some of the sham.

cludes that some of the Communist countries already are overextended and may he unable to meet their future ohligations. Other countries may find themselves in similar straits unless the volume of trade slows considerably. According to the study, Eastern Europe's net deht grew between 1974 and 1977 from $13 hillion to $46 hillion. Almost two-thirds of that is owed to Western banks. Most of the Communist countries now have a higher ratio of dehis to export earnings than do most of the underdeveloped countries. What all of that adds up to is this quastion: Just how heneficial to the West is the growth of East-West trade? WASHINGTON — With the election past and the new Congress, two months away from assembling. President Carter and his administration colleagues have challenges to prove his compassion — for the first time in two years — a kind of breathing space in which they can assess where they are and

The budget Carter submits this January will be in effect until a month before election day. The legislative program he shapes in the next 60 days will define the domestic agenda for the 1979 and 1980 congressional sessions.

If he is able to negotiate the final terms of a strategic arms agreement with the Soviet Union between now and the end of the year, the SALT treaty will be the focus of the next great foreign-policy debate. If he cannot, the consequence will be felt in defense budgets for the remain-der of his administration.

Mideast Talks

Similarly, with the Middle East talks. An Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty seems almost assured something no one would have supposed possible when Carter took office. But it is still uncertain whether that agreement will be the first step toward a comprehensive Middle Eastern settlement or a barrier to its accomplishment.

Most of all, the period ahead is important in the struggle to save the dollar, stem inflation and set the domestic economy on a course which, if possible, sustains growth and, at least avoids a severe and orolonged recession.

That is no small order. But it is not so intimidating a task as Jimmy Carter faced two years ago, when he set out to construct a govern-ment and give it leadership after a sbaky election victory.

His skills bave developed in the period of apprenticeship, and the priorities for him are perhaps clearer now than they were two years ago. They can be summarized in three words which he used repeatedly in his own campaign: stability. compassion and competence.

World Order

Stabilizing the economy must be his first priority. But that process is inevitably going to be painful. Kuwait and the smaller states of the Gulf face the same troubles if they are oot careful. Iraq. Libya and Algeria have been able to avoid the trouble only by a kind of radical put-on. While doing business like crazy with the capitalist world, their leaders have pretended to be super-radicals in political matters. Because all three countries are relatively isolated they have been able to get away with the put-on. But even that act cannot go on forever. Especially since the rising impor a critical impact upon Israel. The Israelis, badly scared by the 1973 war with Egypt and Syria, panicked themselves into believing that their chief ally, the United States chief ally, the United States, would sacrifice them to its interest in assured supplies of Arab oil.

Partly as a result, the Israelis elected, in the spring of 1977, a hard-line government under Prime Minister Menachem Begin. Mr. Begin came to office determined to show that Israel could fend for itself even without the total backing of Washington.

To that end he initiated - chiefly through secret meetings in Morocco in September, 1977 moves for a separate peace with Egypt. Those moves bore fruit in dent Sadat's visit to Jerusalem last November. The Jerusalem visit led directly to the Camp David ac-cords between Israel and Egypt. The prospect of peace between Egypt and Israel turns the screw on every Arab government. Those who prided themselves on their toughness toward Israel now have to prove their mettle. That is why the Iraqis. Syrians and Palestine Liberation Organization called an and-Sadat summit meeting in Baghdad. More modernte governments with connections to Egypt — especially those with oil to export — at least had to prove that they were not going to sell out the Palestini-ans. That is why Jordan, Saudi Arabia and the shiekhdoms of the Gulf sent officials to Baghdad.

Inevitably there follows some realignment in the Arab world. The highly vulnerable moderate states now bave to take their distances from Egypt and stand a little closer to the Palestinians. The extreme radicals — Iraq. Libya, Algeria and parts of the PLO — have to curb their rhetorie to make their charges of an Egyptian sellout more appealing to the outside world.

Here in Egypt, President Sadat has to adjust his regime away from cooperation with Saudi Arabia and toward cooperation with Israel and the United States that explains his recent shifts in the Cabinet, the army and the structure of Egypt's political parties.

Perhaps it will be possible for all the governments involved to make the required adjustments without falling from power. But the transi-tion is bound to be delicate. In any case, the Middle East is entering a testing time of extreme tension. Anybody who raises the pressures higher is playing with fire.

William J. Leahy From Dublin:

Because they have the longest tradition of armed discipline in the country, republicans are thought to be the only ones capable of pulling off the largest jobs, and the police are no match for them.

DUBLIN — A Belfast man re-first time be was frightened to walk down Dublin's O'Connell Street. In the second quarter of this year there was a 15 percent rise in in-dictable crime over the same quarter of the previous year, and crimes against the person were up 44 per-cent. Still, the Irish Republic remains one of the least violent of countries, with a marder rate of less than 5 percent of that of a large American city. In an Irish court an assault is given the most serious consideration by spectators and

But astonishing by any standards are the constantly increasing num-bers of armed robberies of post offices, payrolls, banks, mail trains, and armored cars, crimes carried out with such ease that the police are in a constant state of embar-

The latest government figures show that up to October there have been 610 robberies in which more than £1.6 million were taken. Less than 2 percent of the money has been recovered.

The frequency, variety, and coincidence of the robberies have created an atmosphere which has continued to encourage newcomers. In September, two security vans were robbed in two days. If £22,000 was taken from a bakery at gunpoint, £35,000 was taken in Galway by men armed with butchers' knives and pickaxes. In early August. £66,000 was taken in one day in several armed robberies. In one case, "Tackled Bandits Got Away," but in another the police arrived at the scene by accident and in the fact is that some of them have crossfire a woman clerk was shot in the back. A Kerry postal employee was charged with stealing £37,000 from his place of work, and a policeman was given only one year in prison for inciting a colleague to aid and abet a bank robbery. Two raids in Shannon on one day netted £22,000 from a bank and £36,000 in industrial diamonds.

Longest Trial

But it has been the well-orga-nized crimes like "The Great Train Robbery" which have received the greatest publicity. In March, 1976, several men set off detonators on a line in County Kildare, stopped the train with a red light and made off with £500,000. Soon the office of the Irish Republican Socialist Party was raided and 16 of its members brought to trial before the Special Criminal Court, where republicans are tried without juries. The trial became the longest in the history of the state, and because of the death of one of the judges, there must be a second trial On June 7, a nine-man gang took £500,000 from a security van in broad daylight on the Limerick-Killarney road, making use of twoway radios, steel-cutting equip-ment, hijacked trucks to block the road, and vans painted to look like government vehicles. More recenty, £50,000 was taken in Donegal wn from a post office mail van.

In none of these cases was the noney protected by armed guards. But what may seem like laxness in the response to this crime wave is better explained by the part that history has played in the attitudes of the Irish toward banks and arms. If it is true that with predictable exceptions the Irish have no great love of banks, it may be said that traditionally banks have been asso-ciated with foreign exploitation and have, in fact, played little part in pooling capital within the country.

Even under the current pressures, neither the police, the public, nor the politicians show much will to arm the man on the beat. At the formation of the state, the govern-ment, realizing that the Irisb people would thereafter remind them of foreign domination, bravely organized an unarmed force. Thus it is that the armed robbers are now putting the government in a diffi-cult moral position. The public is upset mainly if someone gets hurt. A woman postal elerk, describing a robbery on the radio, began, "The lads came in . . ." And at a recent trial the police mitigated the testi-mony against the defendants by stating that the robbers downed their weapons at the sight of an armed detective. No one wants bloodsbed.

In this veroally attuned country the raiders are frequently localized by their accents, and their political essociations, if any are quickly established. Many raiders come from the North, where there are now fewer robberies. This summer two Dublin bankrobbers were in-terviewed on the state radio about the details of their work. Many people, including the police, recognized their voices.

Thirty percent of the major armed robberies are said to be the work of the Provisional and Offical IRAs and the IRSP. Verification of the republicanism of robbers ca.: be determined in part by the counsel they choose, in part by the cour! in which they are tried, and, assuming that they are convicted, whether or not they are sent into one of the republican sections of a prison. Because they have the longest tradition of armed discipline in the country, republicans are thought to be the only ones capable of pulling off the largest jobs, and the police are no match for them. Furthermore, they stand the chance of being granted amnesty once the troubles in the North end. Police theorize that the republican raids tend to come in spurts timed to pay for large arms arrivals from outside the country. But most armed rob-beries are said to be done by 12 criminal gangs whose members are known to the police.

The relatively loose security in banks is tightening up only slowly. One bank in the western part of the country used to pile banknotes 2 feet high inside the windows that faced on the street. Tellers frequently stepped away from their wide, open windows with stacks of pounds within reach. Many modern bank buildings feature streetlevel open doors — without armed guards. Transfer of mooey is handled by unarmed men carrying out "drills." After a recent upsurge in armed robberies, Dublio's largest bank was gnarded by heavily armed soldiers — but only for two

The police, of course, are embar-rassed by their clear inability to cope. Morale is low. Until a recent wage settlement. Irish policemen with 15 years experience earned £1.600 less per year than did their English counterparts.

Lack of Policy

Conor Brady, a Dublin journal-ist, reports a lack of overall crime policy, little planning, no serious crime unit, no instructions to police on how to handle armed robberies confusion over jurisdiction, insufficient money for informers, no imdercover agents, no modern com-munications system, no study of police time response, and, he concludes, ". . . criminal investigation consists mainly of two men working in a little office at the back of Dublin Castle." Brady claims that he knows of only one case in 900 in which a telephone call from a citizen to the police resulted in the interruption of an armed robbery.

After a famous art robbery couple of years ago, the lord and lady of the house untied themselves and activated the alarm system that connected their home to the closest police station. Tired of waiting for the police, they walked to the sta-tion and found it closed, as many are closed much of the time in rural Ireland.

As the new Irish parliament opens, the government is under pressure to do something about the problem, but as yet its plans are

What is clear is that Ireland is suffering from a bad case of uneven development. If it is true that the policies of recent Irish governments are succeeding in building an in-dustrial base, it is also true that such development has badly outstripped those ancillary services that tend to mitigate the pains brought about by such rapid development, services like better road and telephone systems. And a modern police force to compare the em police force to cope with sophisticated robbers who show no hesitancy to modernize.

Forget Altman's 'Remember'

By Thomas Quinn Curtiss PARIS. Nov. 7 (IHT) — "Remember My Name" (at the Elysees Lincoln and the Quintette in English) is hy Alan Rudolph, of "Welcome to L.A." fame. His new film has been produced by Robert Altman, who sees him as a white hope of the American avant-garde. It has been inspired, according to its director-author, by the melo-dramatic feminine-hysteria movies of the 1930s. In a sense, it is an oblique and grave parody of that genre. A study of obsessive mono-mania. Rudolph proclaims it the portrait of a modern woman, but it actually is a modernization of the Davis-Crawford-Stanwyck heroine.

Geraldine Chaplin is its star, and her sinister persecution of a married man is set forth as in an anxiety dream. She Launts his bouse and his place of work, and finally terrorizes his wife. Why? Because she is his ex-wife (amazingly, his cur-rent spouse never knew he bad one): she is back from serving a murder sentence and, with lunancy in her eyes, she is demanding certain rights. She is a liberated woman - at least she has been liberated from prison.

Rudolpb's are merely shadowy outlines of characters, and con-quently their supposed emotions seem to issue not from themselves so much as from a hidden scenarist who is operating a talking machine. So sketchy is the technique, so vague the motivation, that much of what happens is ludicrous. The be-lated exposition, rattled off when the paranoid stalker has been ar-rested and is confronted by her exhushand in a police station, is utterly unconvincing. The players cannot make it plausible, because the script is as unhinged as the heroine. Geraldine Chaplin, more skilled in comedy than in drama, succeeds in creating a chilling image of the vengeful woman, and Anthony Per-

His windfall funds are diminished hy luxury hotel and couturier bills and by a jaunt to Capri. When he surprises the girl with a TV producer, he goes mad and is hospitalized. The trauma induces partial amnesia; his memory is so dim that when released he has only a vague recollection of his inamorata — who is rising to televi-sion fame. Still a vain liar, he makes his way back to the old actors' home. Risi tells all this in a bantering vein; he has taken this anecdote of youth's fatal allure and set it in a sardonic farce. The sequences in the old-age home, for instance, have just a soupcon of pathos, and even that is diluted with clever caricature. His protagonist, though he is coming to an unhappy end, is no tragic figure — merely a boastful, preposterous ham. He is utterly untalented, as is illustrated when he revives some of his former routines:

10 Sides of Keith Jarrett --- And All Solo Piano

PARIS (IHT) — It takes coutage to issue a 10-record solo piano album. Courage, talent. ego, and maybe good husiness sense. Keith Jarrett has in the past few years grown to be one of the hottest names in jazz, and this has come about by his reaching the chamber-music audience in addition. He has a wide market and knows how to service it.

In any case his, "Sun Bear Concerts" (148 German marks, 500 French francs or $75), recorded live in Japan two years ago and issued in October hy ECM (Munich), is certainly an

A Master

The great solo pianist Art Ta-tum did not make many more than 10 LPs during his entire career. Neither did Thelonious Monk, Jarrett's 10-in-1 reflects our age, where more is generally equated with better. But this is not to imply lack of quality: Jarrett is a master.

Listening to all 10 one after the other is not a good idea. It doesn't do the music justice. The basic sound, which becomes monotonous after a while, overpowers the content, which is intelligent, passionate and var-ied. They should be taken as 10 sbort stories to be read between other reading material, to be put on the shelf and savored slowly. Perhaps this is what Jarrett means by his dedication: "Think of your ears as eyes."

Bluesy Interludes

The pulse cannot be described as "swinging" in the strict sense of the word. Though there are bluesy interludes (he is at his best here), it is not for dancing or even finger-popping. Generally the music is rather Eastern, in that the purpose seems to be as much to calm the spirit as to interest the intellect. There are trance-like passages remeniscent of Terry Reilly, Phil Glass or Steve Reich, The sections are strung together with lucidity, a sense of form and a great deal of drama. One mundane quibble. The records are not numbered consec-utively, so that finding a particu-lar side at a particular time can be frustrating.

The "Sun Bear Concerts" are an important example of the widening scope of that 20th century form of improvisation called jazz. Jarrett has done more than create a style — he is inventing a form.

De Gaulle Show a Surprise Hi

By Jane Friedman

DARIS, Nov. 7 (IHT) - Charles de Gaulle is alive and well and thriving in Paris, even though he died eight years ago.

While the nation agonizes over a recent interview with a 90-year-old Vichy France official accused of collaborating with the Nazis and wrestles with the painful memories of World War II, thousands of Parisians are flocking daily to soek up a hrighter version of the past con-tained in "L'Exposition Charles de Gaulle." The exhibition opened a week ago in a chamber of city hall, and so far has drawn about 20,000 people.

Audiovisual Account

The show - hundreds of photographs, documents, memorabilia and an audiovisual account of the general's achievements — is the first major exhibit on France's great leader. It was organized by the Institut Charles de Gaulle and partially funded by city half and the defense ministry.

"We never expected so many people," said Denise Martin, a city hall employee, on a recent day when visitors crowded to buy posters of de Gaulle after walking solemnly through the exhibit. "He's going to bypass Napoleon, just you wait and see," said a foreigner observing the scene.

The show is unusually well constructed, with 80 panels that lead the visitor from the birth of de Gaulle in 1890, through his school days, his marriage, his soldiering years and on to his famous resistance appeal of June 18, 1940; thence from London, the liberation of Paris in August of 1944 and other great moments.

Through pictures and docu-ments, de Gaulle's finest hours are glorified. His more controversial periods are minimized — the civil unrest in May of 1968, for instance, is relegated to one small panel.

is in 1944 seem to underplay the role of U.S. forces.

"We know you Americans helped and thank you," said Jean-Francois Dufourny, 32, who came to the exhibit out of curiosity. "What can you expect?" he added. "This is a Charles de Gaulle exhibit chez Jacques Chirac. If you want to see pictures of Americans, better go to the war museum at the inval-

The exhibit covers de Gaulle's official trips as president of the republic; his thoughts on weighty subjects are conveyed through quotations from his writings and speeches. Of France's "vocation," for example, he said: "There is a pact between the grandeur of France and the freedom of the world."

At the center of the exhibit are de Gaulle's army uniform, a sabre he carried in 1941 and the typewriter he used in Britain in 1940.

On exhibit for the first time are the text of his victory speech of May 8,1945, his geography book from St. Cyr military academy and a copy of his handwritten will.

A 15-minute audiovisial presentation mesmerizes an SRO audience 30 times a day. It consists of colored slides flashed on 10 miniscreens with a narration enumerating de Gaulle's "achievements" — the resistence, the liberation, the nuclear force de frappe and social progress.

Quebecois Cause

De Gaulle "accelerated the recognition of the rights of the Quebecois," says the narrator, referring to de Gaulle's 1967 visit to Canada, during which be proclaimed "Vive le Quebec Libre." The statement caused a diplomatic incident.

"We wanted to portray him without erasing the problems he encountered," says Pierre Lefranc, secretary general of the Institut Charles de Gaulle, which conceived the exhibit and then sold the idea to Mayor Jacques Chirac, a Gaullist, "Nevertheless" says Lefranc, "de Gaulle was a great statesman,"

The institute is headquartered in a 19th-century huilding on the left bank, where de Gaulle worked from 1947 to 1958 when he was out of power. De Gaulle left the huilding to the institute along with 15 cartons of documents.

The institute also owns the home in Lille where de Gaulle was born and the forest at Colombey-les-Deux-Eglises where de Gaulle is DETROIT, Nov. 7 (NYT) — "This week is my isstening week." Lee lacocca said yesterday as he settled into his new office chair and began his first week as president and chief operating officer of Chrysler, the nation's No. 3 automobile maker.

In his first interview since he joined Chrysler, the former Ford Motor president said it was obvious that his new company "cannot be all things to all people" in the future as it has tried to be in the "We'll have to be a little more selective," Mr. lacocca explained. ## U.S. Offshore Oil Wealth Held Possible

The prospect of an undiscovered oil bonanza beneath the Atlantic outer continental shelf would be contrary to the widely held belief that the U.S. East Coast is more likely to be a source of additional natural-gas

Still, there is an undercurrent of speculation by some geologists and others that there is at least a possibility that a substantial oil-bearing province lies deep below the unex-plored Atlantic offshore frontier. Some people call it the "carbonate

Generally at such great depths, geologists expect to find gas, rather than oil. But part of the interest in the possible oil potential of the carbonate rim arises from its similarity to productive oil-bearing rocks in other places. The carbonate rim resembles, for instance, the so-called "golden lane" formation in the prolific Poza Rica field in east-

Formidable Obstacles

According to Robert Sheridan, a marine geophysicist who is an asso-ciate professor of geology at the University of Delaware, there is potential for a massive oil discovery along the east coast, but there are formidable obstacles along the way. "It would have to be a big find." he says, "because of the new and expensive technology involved in producing oil from such great depths."
Oil men would have to drill in water depths of up to 1,000 feet and then drill four miles or more beneath the surface to tap the oilbearing rocks that may lie there. He also cautions that "exploring in carbonate rocks is very difficult," and involves some "pretty complex structures.

U.S. Borrowing Marks and Yen In IMF Funding

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7 (AP-DJ) — The International Mometary Fund announced today that it has completed arrangements to borrow bout $1 billion in Deutsche marks and yen to help finance a currency drawing by the U.S. government. The IMF said that the West German Bundesbank is providing marks equivalent to 583 million special drawing rights. The govern-ment of Japan, the IMF said, will. provide yen equivalent to an addi-tional 194 million SDRs. The IMF explained that it was borrowing the West German and Japanese currencies after activating its general arrangements to borrow (GAB). Through the GAB borrowings, the U.S. will be receiving the equivalent of $752 million in marks and about $250 million in yen. Generally, under the GAB, the major monetary nations in Western Europe plus the United States, Canada and Japan, stand ready to lend their currencies to the IMF when the monetary agency needs supplementary resources to cover large drawings by countries that are members of the GAB group.

The IMF also said that a 50-percent increase in the IMF's regular financial resources to about $76.2 billion is necessary "in view of the possibility of large payments imbal-ances" among its member nations over the next few years.

Without the increase in member countries' quotas, the IMF execu-tive panel said the agency's "liquidity position is likely to be vulnerable, even though the volume of us-able currencies available to the fund has recently increased."

Miller Sees Slower U.S. Growth

By James L. Rowe Ir.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7 (WP) -U.S. economic growth could drop as low as 2.5 percent next year as a result of White House efforts to fight inflatioo and save the dollar, Federal Reserve Board chairman

William Miller said yesterday.

The prediction is the lowest so far from a government official. Mr.

Miller said the economy would grow between 2.5 and 3 percent. Many economists do not think a growth rate that low will create enough jobs to keep unemployment from rising. Many also think that if the government tries to keep the economy growing that slowly, the oation could slip into a recession.

However, Mr. Miller said in an interview, there is no reason to think that slower growth oext year will cause the unemployment rate to rise above 6 percent. The unemployment rate has hovered around 6 percent all year and was 5.8 percent in October. He admitted that the Fed and the administration are walking a tight line in trying to fight inflation without causing a

Further Steps

He hinted that the administra-tion and the Fed are willing to take further tightening steps to combat inflation and the slide in the dollar's value, but was oot specific. Mr. Miller said his revised growth estimate - earlier he and most administration officials had been talking about 3 percent to 3.5 percent next year — is the result of the heavy doses of monetary tight-ening the Fed already bas applied as well as "any other follow-up that may be necessary."

He said he is confident that the economy will not slip into a reces-

GM Cuts Payout To $2.50/Share

DETROIT, Nov. 7 (AP-DI) - In surprise move, General Motors cut its year-end dividend to $2.50 a share from a record $3.25 a share in 1977. Some observers believe the action reflects an unexpectedly cau-tious outlook for 1979 new-car sales by GM.

GM said the 1978 year-end divi-dend is comprised of a special divi-dend of $1.50 a share and the regular quarterly dividend of $1 a share, both payable Dec. 9 to stock of record Nov. 16.

GM recently forecast that industrywide 1979-model new-car sales could reach a near-record 11.5 miltion units, substantially higher than the projections made by other do-mestic auto companies and some outside economists.

Company officials said they still believe "that 1979 can be another year of outstanding achievement," but added the year-end dividend reflects "pressing demands of the business and uncertainties (which) require that the corporation main-tain its strong capital position." Motors cut its yearend dividend to $2.50 a share from the $3.25 voted last year.

The Dow Jones industrial average fell 14.81 points to 800.07, with declines leading advances 1,422 to 180. Volume rose to 25.32 million shares from yesterday's 20.45 million

The Commerce Department said spending on new construction is expected to increase by 2 percent to $201.6 billion next year after a 15-percent rise in 1978. # Weeds Seen As Possible Cash Crops

CHICAGO, Nov. 7 (AP-DI) — Scientists looking for new cash crops are turning to weeds, with suprising results.

Weeds and wild plants will not become valuable commodities overnight, but researchers have found that some nuisance plants have uses ranging from animal feed to sources of natural rubber. The problem is to find extraction and processing methods that are economical on large commercial

States, for example, scientists are sysing a desert shrub known as gasyule for its potential as a source of natural rubber. The country currently imports all of its natural rubber, most of which is used in the production of tires. Rubber from the guayule plant is basically similar to that of the hevea tree, which grows in the Far East and Africa and currently supplies most of the world's natural rubber.

Goodyear Tire & Rubber is growing guayule at its Litchfield ark, Ariz., farm to determine economical growing and processing nethods, Jack Riedl, Goodyear's nanager of plantation operations, says successful research could lead to commercial production of guayale rubber in several years and "by the 1990s, guayule rubber could account for 25 percent of our natural rubber supply."

Meanwhile, in Peoria, Ill., Agriculture Department scientists have dentified 34 species of weeds and wild plants as potentially good courses of hydrocarbons. The scintists hope hydrocarbons prohiced by these plants could be competitive with synthetic petrohemicals derived from crude oil, auch as oils, waxes, resins and turbantine.

Researchers at the University of Minnesota are taking a slightly different look at the potential of weeds. Gordon Marten and Robert Andersen have completed a study hat shows some weeds commonly ound in alfalfa fields may have as such nutritional value as the crop

THE PARADE OF HEROES Legendary Figures in American Lore Selected and edited by Tristram Potter Coffin and Hennig Coher Anchor Press-Doubleday. 630 pp. $12.50. Reviewed by Robert Kirsch

TN MOST cultures folklore is a I stabilizing factor, giving per-manence to tradition and coherence to life in an uncertain and ever-changing world. The folklore of the United States is different, the editors of this large and read-able collection tell us. In America folklore has been sorely tested. Im-migrants brought with them firmly established folk traditions and folkways, only to see them eroded and discarded as their children and grandchildren have been

"Members of occupational groups — forest scouts and trappers, canallers, railroad-section hands, lumbermen — have developed tales, songs, sayings, and beliefs ... only to see the occupations of the companions of the c tions disappear or become so modi-fied by industrial change as to be unrecognizable."

In fact change is at the core of American folklore as it is in so much of American life. Mass communication, social and economic mobility, transportation and the effects of the draft have all broken up regional lore. Yet, as the editors show, lore has a long and enduring life and can achieve a coherence out of change itself. Popular lore the mass media, promotional mat-ter, advertising copy, magazines and newspapers, talk — continues to create heroes and heroines, legendary figures.

By extending the notion of folk heroes, we have not only the mythic figures such as the trickster Brer Rabbit, but we also gain profes-sional writers' creations or embellishments — like Pecos Bill, Babe Ruth, Paul Bunyan or the Lone Ranger. They come from m stories, verses, songs, TV and mov-ie scripts, "designed in advance for calculated purposes, to publicize a cause or turn a profit."

The hero himself, seeking publicity, may be behind the campaign to

But Jones came out smoking in the second half, completing 7 of 11 passes for 152 yards and two touch-downs. And he was still firing even after four Redskins converged on him late in the third quarter and smacked him hard to the ground.

In for All Downs

Jones got up slowly after that tackle, holding his aching shoulder and grimacing in pain. But he didn't miss a down and received a anding ovation as he trotted of the field at the final gun.

There was plenty of applause for Jones early in the third period after the spectacular pass to Carr, Baltimore's best deep threat.

On second and 10 from his 22,
Jones aimed at the left sideline where Carr was cutting toward the Colt bench at the 45. Cornerback Joe Lavender came flying through the air and just missed knocking down the pass, but Carr had enough concentration to hang on to the ball and streaked toward the end zone. Chris Hanburger was his closest pursuer, and he was at least 10 yards behind.

Toni Linhart's extra point gave Baltimore a 14-10 lead with 12:04 left in the third quarter. Kilmer was given another series to get his act together before coach Jack Pardee gave him the hook.

No More Success

Kilmer moved the Redskins to a first down at the Colt 42. But three plays later, on third and 12 at the 44, his low pass over the middle to Thompson was just incomplete.

Theismann failed to pick up a first down on his first try but the Redskins got a favorable call on their next series that had the Colt faithful upset.

A 35-yard pass from Theismann to Mike Thomas carried to the Colt 38. Two plays later, Theismann's pass to Buggs over the middle got the ball to the Colt 16. On second and eight from the 14, Theismann again aimed at Buggs, this time in the right corner of the end zone. Buggs was flat on his back as the ball sailed overhead and officials ruled that Norm Thompson had interfered with him. The Redskins had first and goal at the one, and Riggins slammed over for a 17-14 lead. In all, Thiesmann finished with 6 completions of 12 attempts for 92 starts.

Penn State Nears the Head of the Class

By Joseph Durso

NEW YORK, Nov. 7 (NYT) -The longest winning streak in col-lege football today belongs to Pean State, untouched in 17 games. And that's not bad when you remember that State is coached by Joe Paterno, an academic zealot with a degree in English literature and the author of radical bits of wisdom

"I consider football just another extracurricular activity. It should never be taken out of that context." In pursuit of that intellectual ide-like this:

al, Paterno's boys have browbeaten nine other universities in a row this semester. They were so eager to begin their extracurricular activity that they assembled on campus Sept. 1, defeated Temple on a field goal with a minute to go and then built a record of 4-0 before the rest of the student body had attended a biology lecture.

Only one other school in America comes close to that level of success in extracurriculars this autumn, and that's Oklahoma, which also has manhandled rivals on nine consecutive Saturdays. But next weekend, Oklahoma must play Nebraska, which just scored 63 points against Kansas while winning for the eighth time in nine

But through it all, Paterno has been hounded by one ideal that somehow cluded Penn State: No. 1 ranking in the nation. It's an honor that often chudes Eastern teams, but that's a problem the geography professors will have to figure out.

The intellectual life has had a few strains this semester. There was tough Temple in the opener, a team that stayed even with Penn State until the last minute when Matt Bahr kicked his field goal. By the time the boys had dumped Ohio State in their third game, Bahr had kicked nine field goals. Then Southern Methodist came within five points of an upset the next week, but since then nobody's come close: 58-0 over Texas Chris-tian, 30-0 over Kentucky, 45-15 against Syracuse, 49-21 over West Virginia and 27-3 over Maryland last Saturday.

The Soccer Scene

Home Is Where the Hat Is

By Rob Hughes.

LONDON, Nov. 7 (IHT) - The homing instinct remains pretty irre-sistible, even in so mercenary a sporting age.

O.K. so the flights of soccer stars prepared to travel 7,000 miles to foreign climes are in their infancy; the grass may be no greener but th money is certainly more reliable. Yet, in a land so compact as England, where home is a short air-hop away, the strain of living that distance sometimes snaps the professional temperament.

In the dark ages of Don Revie's England two international players, Kevin Keegan and Kevin Beattie, skipped camp to be found later at their mothers' bosoms in Doncaster and Carlisle respectively. Keegan, of course, is now a visitor from overseas, committed to life in Hamburg and to dropping in for the odd international or television appear-

A Similar Pull

Beattie spends most of his time, it seems, on the treatment table at Ipswich, though he managed, between knee operations, to play a vi-tal part in that club's winning the FA Cup last May. His manager, Bobby Robson, is like Beattle a Geordie, well able to understand the pull of his homeland, but also a former player who had to make his pad in London while he built a fine reputation in England's midfield.

As of vesterday, Robson knows afresh the experience of an absconder to Co. Durham. Eric Gates, a 24-year-old lpswich midfield battler. ran home to Mum in Stain-drop, and says he's never coming back until the manager promises him a permanent place in the Ipswich team.

Robson is an understanding man, but he can be quickly brought to the edge of his tether. Only a week ago he fined four of his senior players £50 a man for staying out late before European duty and, after Gates' disappearing act, Rob-son comments; "I don't know what has got into my players. It's time they learned about money and loyalty. They need to be taught a lesson and I'm the man to do it."

Brother There First

Whether that, and a stern warning that he will hold Gates to a four-year contract will bring the truant back is doubtful. "I feel very depressed," says Gates, "I keep asking for a transfer but the manager won't give me one. I won't be back unless I get a regular place in the first team." Meanwhile, Gates is photographed with his mother kissing his cheek; he may well. I fancy, get a call from big brother Bill Gates, who became one of the most reliable and tough defenders in the league with Middlesbrough.

Where, meanwhile, is home for a nomad? Ted MacDougall has col-lected 284 goals, more than anyone currently playing in England, in his wanderings around seven clubs. He has become the first player to aggregate over half a million pounds in transfer fees, and yesterday he voluntarily left the First Division and Southampton to return to Bournemouth of Division Four, "My heart has always been at Bournemouth," says Ted the Goal. Well, not exactly always. Born in Inverness, Scotland, he began his career at Liverpool though, after 18 months and no first team opportunity, he moved on to York for a mere £5,000. From there the goals began to flow, and the transfer fees to escalate with moves from York to Bournemouth, to Manchester United, to West Ham, to Norwich and to Southampton.

In the Courts

Manchester paid the highest fee, £195,000, but, after a change of manager, quickly re-sold Mac-Dougall, who had scored five goals in 18 games. Right now, Bourne-mouth is claiming through the courts £25,000 which it says Manchester promised once Ted had scored 20 goals.

The laconic MacDougall was the star of the still-unfinished court case. Ron Greenwood, the manager at West Ham, had, like Manchester paid a big fee for MacDougall and quickly passed him on to Norwich. "That manager," counsel point out, "is the current England manager."

"That," replied MacDougall,

Ulster Beaten By All Blacks

BELFAST, Nov. 7 (AP) - The All Blacks rugby team of New Zealand tamed Ulster, 23-3, in wind and rain at Belfast today. The All Blacks led, 7-0, at halftime after kicking into the strong wind. It abated a little in the second half, but the Irish team never looked like capable of getting back into the match.
The first half was uncomfortable for the New Zealanders, trying to adapt to the weather and contending with Ulster's long-kicking tactics. But they gradually took command of the play and winger Bryan Williams landed a 50-yard penalty goal in the 23d minute and added a try seven minutes later. In the second half there were tries by hooker John Black and winger Bob Kururangi, while fullback Brian McKechnie converted both tries and kicked two penalty goals. Alan Goodrich kicked a penalty goal for Ulster.

And now Bournemouth is getting him back for nothing. Not that he returns a failure; in 12 games this season MacDougall has scored a further seven goals. Then why is he leaving? His relationship with another manager has something to do with it. Lawrie McMenemy, his Southampton boss recently tore Southampton boss, recently tore into him after a particularly lethargic show from the center-forward.

MacDougall listened to ex-pletives deleted in the locker room, drew himself to his full 5 foot 10 (against the manager's 6 foot 4) and said: "Oh, 1 can be much worse than that." He hasn't had a chance to prove that, and says now he is bored with the "pathetic standard" in the First Division and would prefer to play out his last season "helping out my first real love, Bournemouth."

He's almost 32 now, and a few more goals for Fourth Division Bournemouth will dn no harm whatever to trade in the three sports shops he opened in his previous spell there and continues to own. Home, for Scot Ted Mac-Dougall, is the penalty area and the business he happens to have built up in the seaside town of Bournenurse who has made three trips to the Soviet Union to try to marry a Russian citizen, is returning to Balnimore — pregnant but without a busband. She is still not wed to Yuri Balovienkov, 29, the computer specialist she met during a 1977 visit to Moscow. She and Balovienkov courted by long-distance telephone during the summer of 1977 and fell in love. Miss Kuzmenko went to the Soviet Union intending to marry him twice last year and again this September. Miss Kuzmenko, who said she is six weeks pregnant with Balovienko's child, first received permission to marry Nov. 29 of last year. But her visa expired during the mandatory 30-day waiting period; she said the wedding could not be advanced or the visa extended. She currently has permission to be married Dec. 5, but had to leave the country because her visa has again expired.
